What is a serial?

- Resource issued in successive parts, usually bearing numbering, that has no predetermined conclusion
 - Journals
 - Annual reports
 - Continuing directories
 - Newspapers
 - Monographic series
- Reproductions of serials and resources that exhibit characteristics of serials are also included
 - Newsletters of events

Things to remember

- Record describes serial as a whole
- Records are almost always edited after they are created
 - A full level PCC record may not have up-to-date information and may need work
- Serials cataloging rules have changed radically over time
 - How information is shown in records varies

Libraries decide what type of records to accept.
Many do not accept latest entry records.

Dates in serial records

- Very important in identifying what belongs on a record
- Found in a variety of fields
- Not all of these dates fields will be in a record – look in multiple places!

- Minor changes
 - Do not require the creation of a new bibliographic record
 - Are added to an existing record
 - Appear in a variety of fields and formatted in various ways

Major/minor change rules have evolved over time

- All title changes were once considered major
 - Over time, gradually more and more title changes became minor
 - More changes to non-title elements were at one time considered major
 - Methods of treating minor changes have also evolved over time
- The same type of change will be treated differently in different records because of these changes to the cataloging rules

- Most title changes
 - Except for those covered by minor title change exceptions
 - Corporate/conference body changes that affect 1XX fields
 - Some edition statement changes
 - Most changes to physical format

 - 362 ending information
- 780/785 fields linking earlier and later titles
 - Links are to the most recent previous and/or most recent later titles
- Explanatory 5XX notes if necessary
- Sometimes result in qualified uniform titles because of multiple changes back and forth to the same title

Minor changes

Minor title changes and title variants

- Both are found in 246 fields
- Combination of indicator values and notes explain what type of 246 it is
 - See handout for details about indicator values
- If the only titles on your piece match variant titles, your piece most likely does NOT go on that record.
- If the title on your piece matches a minor title change, it most likely DOES go on that record (if the date range, body name, etc. also match).

Minor title changes

- Changes to the title that do NOT require a new record
 - Major/minor title change rules have evolved over time
 - Methods of treating minor title changes have evolved over time

Changes to serials cataloging rules over time

- Originally used earliest entry, then latest entry, now successive entry
- Under successive entry there have been numerous revisions to rules about what constitutes a major change
- The way minor changes are dealt with also changed over time
- Numbering no longer required in order to be a serial
- Frequently must use older bibliographic records that were created under previous rules
 - Catalogers frequently must edit records created under previous rules

Search tips

- ISSN is a starting point, not an ending point
 - There may correctly be multiple bibliographic records for a single ISSN
 - ISSN on piece may not be correct
 - ISSN in record may not be correct
- Do not search by personal author names
- Do not include numbers, dates and other words that may change with each issue in your search
- Generic titles require combined author/title searches

Search tips

- Record may have slightly different title and still be correct record
- Record may have identical 1XX/245 and not be the correct record
- 246s include variant titles and minor title changes
 - Indicator values and notes help identify what type of added title it is
- When titles and body match, still always check other fields
 - S/L fixed field
 - Dates
 - Frequency
 - Physical format
